The Song of Creation

It is time that we understand that the Logos is not done yet. His creative project, Earth, is still under construction. Like the creator of any project, He had an Intention and the Will to implement it. He acquired all the necessary materials and launched the project.

Given our still very limited comprehension of Cosmos, it is rather silly for us to talk about when He started this project. The Lore talks about such things as being "lost in the night of time". It is sufficient for us to conclude that, as does any creator, the Logos knew the end from the beginning. And, it is quite clear that we have not as yet arrived at the end.

I can't really imagine what the initial "blueprints" were like. The ancient Lore talks about the entire project being contained in and initiated by the sounding of a Word. This Word is the Song of Creation. Like all songs, the Word has a number of syllables or perhaps verses. Each verse carries some aspect of the project. What we do have in terms of blueprints or guidelines are certain Cosmic Truths which we call Principles and their reflections which we call Ideas or what Master M. calls "Images of Truth".

We have various words or names for these images of truth such as Justice, Liberty, and Freedom. Each of these is a note, and effect of the Light which they reveal. In essence these Truths or Principles and the words which embody these Ideas are like Cosmic algorithms. Their meaning and significance carry the actual road map for the proper evolutionary unfolding of any Planet, including Planet Earth.

We do not, or at least I do not, know how this works on other planets, but again, according to the ancient Lore, a major aspect or part of the Plan for our planet,

It is sufficient for us to conclude that the Logos knew the end from the beginning. And, it is quite clear that we have not as yet arrived at the end

Earth, is that we, the 4th Kingdom, Humanity, are meant to be co-creators with the Logos or the Initiator/Creator of the Planet. To this end, we, Humanity, have been preprogrammed with free will. Our co-creative job is to progressively contact, understand, and embody these images of truth, and to use them as guidelines for the implementation of the Logos' intention.

The history of this planet is the story of our evolving ability to use our free will to gain ever deeper understandings of the Plan and our gradual willingness to build according to its precepts. The present conditions of life evident on our planet, both the chaotic and the harmonious, are indicators of our success in implementing these ideas or algorithms.

It is true that there is today much in the world that is chaotic or evil. However, there is also much that is Beautiful and Good. The picture is such that the difference between chaos and suffering and beauty and joy is becoming more and more discernible.

Every step we have taken from chaos to harmony has been the result of an alignment of people around the notion of the Common Good. These seemingly explosive moments in time are the effects of consciousness expansion, an expansion that gradually, over time, opens up a wider or deeper view of the basic guiding principles of the Plan until there is sufficient energy and power behind these new understandings to manifest in some new form that is a more accurate metaphor for the original Intention. Among all of these guiding principles perhaps the least understood and most maligned is the Idea of Government.

Government actually is a synthetic concept that embodies the processes and intricacies of the Laws of Right Human Relations, Group Endeavour and Spiritual Approach. The Concept of Government contains the framework of how individually conscious humans live together in cooperative conscious groups. What has passed for government in recent eons was not a government of group conscious individuals.

As humanity evolved from a condition of mass consciousness to what we think of as self consciousness, government took a number of forms. For the most part, it was a kind of rulership of the many by the one or the exclusive few. Who the one or the few were was usually based on who had the physical power to dominate others. In most cases, the power of control of the people was isolated and vested in the rule of a King or an Emperor and a relatively small circle of supporters, or a Priest class headed by an individual who supposedly was the religiously anointed direct representative of a God. These were separated and exclusive groups of the powerful, the super wealthy. All other human beings were the "subjects" or more accurately the property of the Rulers.

This method of government was simply a warped and twisted extrapolation from the kind of structure found in the animal kingdom into the Human. It was a warped aspect of our mass or animal consciousness that was not left behind when we began to move into our heritage as the 4th Kingdom.

Some of these rulerships were benign, and some few, where wisdom functioned more fully, even promoted the evolution of humanity, i.e., the expansion of consciousness. However, the vast majority were primarily set up and implemented to maintain the power of the rulers at any cost. And what we call history is mainly a catalog of the various groups of power brokers who struggled with one another on the dense physical plane for dominance.

This form of government generally did not progressively aid the expansion of human consciousness. However, evolution being what it is, consciousness relentlessly, if somewhat slowly, expanded anyway. The notable expansions were usually led by the selfless sacrificial actions of what we now realize were avatars or leaders. Thus we see that, "From the beginning they struggled. From the beginning we conquered."

So, as I indicated, the deeper meanings of the Idea of Government contain the framework of how individually conscious humans live together in cooperative conscious groups. Now, as the phenomena of group consciousness continues to literally explode among the present seven billion humans, true Government, that is government of the people, for the people, and by the people is becoming possible on the planet. True government now is not only possible; it is imperative if we expect the Planet to survive.

Probably, the most basic concept that we need to fully understand and adopt if we are to avoid some form of extinction, is cooperation. Cooperation is the name we give to the organizing energy of any system characterized by a natural flow of energies which sustain the movement and life of the whole and which are easily observable within any unified field, macro or micro, human or otherwise. The energy system that characterized and, to a very large extent, still characterizes human relations from person to nature or from person to person, all the way to world governments is competition. In competition various forces of intention contend with one another for dominance. The force which dominates is called the winner. The other is the loser.

This is the face of madness.

It is significant that while we pay lip service to such ideas as peace, we still pursue relationship policies and attitudes that operate on the absurdity we call competition. This is true even with those with whom we are supposedly cooperating, our supposed allies. It is amazing that we do not as yet realize that this system which we blindly choose to follow is antithetical to all that we can observe in the natural world. The very notion of Allies begs the question. Who or what in the world are not our allies?

The illusion behind this mass psychosis is that competition or war builds strong individuals, strong people, and strong countries. We prove to ourselves that we are worthy, that we have personal value by defeating and dominating others, and not just our other brothers and sisters, but other everything including nature. Competition is the illusion behind the mantra of endless war, and that means war on all levels of human interaction, which so excites and drives the Retrogressors.

Individuality is actually unavoidable. Cooperation and even the illusion of competition are not possible without individuality. However, true individuality depends not on who or what one can defeat. True individuality is the demonstration of the ability to be a conscious individual and to cooperate with Life at the same time.

It is, of course, redundant to use the words cooperative and conscious in the same phrase.

These two always and only coexist. When one becomes truly conscious, one is actually becoming aware of cooperation.

What we call consciousness, before this awareness of the integrated, interrelated unity of reality dawns on or in us, is really a kind of unconsciousness, a kind of blindness, one might say--a kind of slavery. Totally unaware of the unified field of the whole, we are aware of ourselves or "conscious" of ourselves, that is, we think of ourselves as physical dense bodies which are separated and "different" from all other physical dense bodies, and to prove it we try to dominate, even to the point of killing, the other.

We go around saying I am this body. I am not that other body. We think that our very existence depends on our not being any other I. We struggle to not become lost in some other's identity. We absolutely must remain ourselves.... not to become lost.

The unrealized fact of cosmic physics is that forms exist only in relationship to other forms. Any I without that other I, ceases to exist. Gradually, as consciousness expands out of this illusion of separation, we come to realize this fact, and we begin to understand that although separate from that other I, that other I and myself are pretty much one unit. We each exist only in relationship to each other.

And then we figure out that even if we recognize that we are that other I, we will not disappear. We are that other. We are also this unique individual that can see and understand that we are simultaneously ourselves and our brother or sisters.

It is only as this kind of consciousness develops within the human psyche, what we call group consciousness, that one becomes truly aware of his or her unique individuality. We discover that we each are a unique microcosmic variation of an infinite wholeness, and we have meaning and value only in relation to that Wholeness. So, we have that ancient series of phrases, I Am./I Am That./I Am That I Am. And we understand what the utterance, "When the I is single, the whole body is full of Light." signifies.

On the practical level of the nitty-gritty, all of this has to do with government which is the prime concept through which Goodwill, that touchstone which is transforming the world, is expressed. There are these three basic algorithms or Laws of physics which, at least on our Planet, configure the patterns of human participation in the evolutionary development of the Plan and which are the intrinsic aspects of the concept of Government. These are known to students of the Lore as Right Human Relations, Group Endeavour, and Spiritual Approach.

Huge intellectual tomes have been written about each of these formulas for creative evolution; however, each is an aspect of the basic energy flow system of Cosmos which is cooperation.

Right Human Relations: (Not just with other human beings, but any human interface or activity with any other aspect of Life): Any interface or activity in which a human being is involved that is cooperative, i.e., that participates in the natural flow of energies and sustains the value and life of the whole, is Right.

Group Endeavour: We realize that all Right endeavors, activities or interfaces of any kind on any level or dimension involve Others, and not just human Others, but other Life forms as well. We then consciously and Rightly participate in these endeavors or interfaces as co-creators or brothers and sisters rather than as separative, isolated "individuals". In such relationships we automatically release the Power of the Good which is inherent in Goodwill; thus, all such interfaces serve the Common Good and the General Welfare.

Spiritual Approach: This is the realization that Life is indestructible, indivisible Cosmic energy or Spirit. It is totally rational, harmonious, and beautiful. It is the understanding and acceptance of this algorithm that enables the individual who is aware of his group relations to Others to cooperate, to live with harmlessness and right action, not only in the world of forms but in all dimensions. It is this awareness that enables one to penetrate into those levels of Cosmic

Physics that are still beyond our comprehension which only means that we have not as yet gone to those levels where they are comprehensible.

These three Laws are basic attributes of Goodwill. Goodwill is, after all, only the compiled energy of the Creators Intention: The Will to Good and the Will to Love. This is the power of Goodwill. Any problem which is imaginatively possible will yield to this power.

Only a Will that is truly Free can see and freely choose to operate within these basic algorithms. A will that is cut off, imprisoned by the illusions of separation is not free. It is an enslaved will. It cannot hear, feel or see the Song of Creation.

Wondering if it would mean anything to us, Master D.K. described the Song this way, "...the ceremonial ritual of the daily life of Sanat Kumara, implemented by music and sound and carried on the waves of color which break upon the shores of the three worlds of human evolution, reveal—in the clearest notes and tones and shades—the deepest secret behind His purpose. I am not here writing in symbols, but am making an exact statement of fact. As beauty in any of its greater forms breaks upon the human consciousness, a dim sense is thereby conveyed of the ritual of Sanat Kumara's daily living. More I cannot say. The Rays And The Initiations P. 246,7

When we freely choose to be free, we open ourselves to the Good. We literally begin to be able to hear, feel and see the omnipresent Song of Creation. We become part of it. And as our understanding and comprehension of the Song grows we are able to become conscious co-creators with it.

It is great to sing in a choir!
