Group Meditation Work

November 14, 2012 through December 12, 2012

There is in the last analysis but one world and one humanity, and in a shorter time than you may think boundaries and territories will mean but little. World citizenship will be the only factor of importance.

The Rays And The Initiations P.634

December 13, through January 13, 2012

The present embodies all the past. The future depends upon the clear seeing of the immediate vision. Forget the past and press anew into the glory of the Coming One. Discipleship In The New Age I P. 564

Restoring the Plan

I have spent some time recently casting back through my knowledge, understanding, and personal awareness, rather limited as it is, of our evolving journey from the darkness to the Light; and in all that time, all those lives which we have all lived, I never found a point, a space, where I, we, humanity, were not looking forward, sensing, feeling that there was something coming, something big and that we had to, just had to, reach for it.

This is not that remarkable considering that the Law of Invocation and Evocation runs the system from the tiniest atom up to the whole planet. Oh, we had and still have our moments of despair, our experience with defeat and discouragement. However, there was always that something, that sometimes tiny, spark of knowing that something was coming, that the sun would rise, and we simply kept keeping on.

It was this sensing of the Coming Something and the indefatigable drive to reach out to it, to meet it, to embrace it that lifted us from all fours, to stand up. Ever since, living on Planet Earth has been a series of standing up to one thing or another. Although it took what seems to have been an incredibly long time, eventually we stood up to those whose goal it was to keep us down, those who thought that it was their right, either divinely or simply from raw power, to rule over us.

We turned our backs on these rulers, on uniformity and the status quo. We reached for unity and freedom. We became forerunners and leaders of brothers and sisters, rather than rulers of the masses.

It is true that occasionally one of us would get lost in the brilliance of the incoming Light. We would become so enamored with what was coming that we would forget about those we were leading, and, charging ahead into the light, we would become separated from them, no longer leading because no one was following.

Or we would become enamored with ourselves with our ability to see the way. We would slip back into the role of rulers again no longer leading because we were looking behind ourselves. We were looking at our subjects rather than the Way into the Light for Humanity.

Thus, through experiment, experience, and expression we learned the truth of the razor edge reality of the Golden Path, the Middle Way "which leads between the two great lines of force."

Today, that age old sensing is very powerful. We know something is coming. Although the present scientific community, still mostly mired in the dense physical plane, has not blessed any data that indicates any kind of an astronomical alignment--such as the one between our solar system, the Sun Sirius, and the Galactic core that is dominating the buzz--there are many among us who, not being limited by the demands of physical dense science, know that we are approaching a huge opportunity. Right now, today, we know beyond any doubt that something is coming, something Big, and every passing minute is bringing it closer.

That this is happening, has actually been happening for several hundred years or more, has been registered by many members of the esoteric community or students of the Ageless Lore. Whether it is so or not, is not something we need to discuss. Now, however, this Spiritual Approach has drawn close, very close.

We are registering its approach with all of our sensory apparatus on many dimensions, and this awareness is not exclusive to the esoteric communities. The nearness of the approach is generating a sensing, an awareness of Something Coming, Something Big among most of the people on the planet. I think that even the animals and birds sense it.

This Coming Something or Shift as we have been calling it for several years now, is emerging through the process of Invocation and Evocation or Evolution from the core of Human Consciousness, from Humanity itself.

As has always been the case in our history, when the process of Invocation and Evocation or Evolution reaches a point of critical expansion, or "real change", many of those among us who are sensitive to these impending expansions get very excited. Today, partly because of the Lore around the Mayans and their calendar, the mental and emotional planes of the planet are a frothing sea of frequently glamorous and emotional predictions, complete with scenarios of what will happen, of how it will look and how it will work, of extra planetary and systemic forces appearing on the scene to aid and support us, of huge ascensions and "deportations". Some of these scenarios are highly detailed and specific, others are vague and mystical. This situation is growing only more confusing and muddled as we approach the date of significance on the Mayan Calendar, December 21, 2012.

From my, perhaps a bit more detached, point of view, this Coming Something, while being fostered and aided by various astrological alignments of the Luminaries, which has been forever the case, is not dependent upon "outside help". This Coming Something or Shift, as we have been calling it for several years now, is emerging through the process of Invocation and Evocation or Evolution from the core of Human Consciousness, from Humanity itself.

It has been foretold in the Lore. It is manifesting as an expansion of consciousness from the sense of a separated self existence to the group conscious realization of the fact of the One Humanity. If, indeed, any of the scenarios regarding such allies as the "Galactic Federation" or the "Ashtar Command" and any number of others are actual, their presence is because humanity's own expansion of consciousness has invoked them. They are not here to do our work.

So, that this is a happening, an unfolding process, is not something that we need to debate. What needs discussing very much is how we characterize this approaching Something. We need to be very careful in how we formulate it. We need to "choose the way which leads between two great lines of force".

As I said, we have been here before. In the eons long trail of our trek on this planet, we have lived through these kinds of expansions over and over again. So, today is different only in terms of the brilliance and power, the magnitude of what is Coming. And, we face the same challenges now as we did in every evolutionary expansion into the Light.

We need to lead. We can only lead if we are connected to those whom we are leading. If we allow ourselves to be blinded or absorbed by the Source, the Cosmic Magnet we cannot provide the necessary bridge in consciousness to connect with the negative or receptive pole it needs to complete the circuit and bring the new into manifestation. We are humanity's antahkarana...or not.

We have long been longing for freedom and justice, for a balancing of the scales. It is and has always been our love for humanity and our sensitivity to the heartless suffering and pain that the least among us know as practically their daily bread that has driven us and generated our demand for a better life for all, that has enabled us to choose the middle way.

From the Beginning we have been chanting and following the most ancient prayer in the world "Lead us, O Lord, from darkness to the Light, from the unreal to the Real and from death to Immortality." From the beginning we have been tasked with the responsibility of manifesting the systems of civilization and culture that would serve these Cosmic Intentions, these Prime Directives of the Cosmic Magnet. From the beginning our focus on the Common Good and the General Welfare was the guide that kept us on the Middle Way.

From the beginning we also have had a Free Will. It has taken some time for us to stand up to this fact. When we do we can see that The Lord of Light only leads. "Light and revelation are cause and effect." The Rays And The Initiations P. 75 The Light does not compel or force. It leads, but it is up to us to find the Light, to be able to learn to see the revelation and then to have the will to follow it. What would be the point of creation otherwise?

So, the necessary systems that reflect the Light of equality and freedom will not be manifested for us. The Light provides everything necessary to create a planet of beauty and harmony. However, the building of it is our gift, our responsibility, our avenue into the Truth. Nothing will be done for us, and nothing will be done to us to coerce or force us to build such systems. Our Destiny our future is ours to co-create with the Light... or not. Again, I do not know the ultimate purpose of the Silent Watcher. However, it seems that at least a part of it is to foster a humanity that can do this.

Our assignment, according to the Great Invocation is to restore the Plan on Earth. Obviously, the Plan was hijacked some eons ago, and we have been about the work of restoring it. It seems to me that over the last 4 or 5 hundred years, we have been making some good progress in this effort. If indeed there are, and I have no reason to doubt that there are because there always have been, other planetary and systemic forces available to help us in this moment of extreme importance, it remains our assignment and our responsibility to see the Light that we have invoked and muster up the Will to implement it.

I have been conscious long enough in this life to learn that nothing is impossible, but it is what we do that matters, not what is done to us. What we consciously choose is more likely to happen than not.
